Easter Sermon at Congregational Church.

Rev. Charles H. Ricketts preached to a large congregation at the Greeneville Congregational church Sunday morn-

Congregational church Sunday morning, taking for his text John 20: 17.

"Jesus saith unto her. Touch me not."

The sermon was immediately preceded by a baptismal service.

In part Mr. Ricketts said: The resurrection impresses the thoughtful mind with the changes wrought by death, and these changes are contrarry to the generally accepted notions of death. A careful study of the doctrine of the resurrection as given in the gospon of the of the resurrection as given in the gos-pel shows us that the real significance of death is not found in the destruction of the body but in the exaltation of the spirit; the former is only the subordinate process by which the latter is realized.

We put the greater stress upon the physical in death because this only impresses the senses. It is a physical tragedy that troubles Mary. She has tragedy that troubles Mary. She has seen his body cruelly maltreated on the cross. Now her tears are streaming because that body had apparently been stolen. But when the living Christ appears before her, her deep grief is changed almost to tumultuous joy. The response that Christ makes to her fervent "Rabboni" is somewhat cold: "Touch me not."

How shall we explain this? Christ Norwich—

The only rational explanation is that when our Lord entered the resurrection state there was such an exaltation of spirit, such an outlook upon life in its nobler and grander aspects, after it had lost the impediment of the body, that old the impediment of the body, that old relationships passed from sight. SPECIAL EXERCISES HELD

IN SUNDAY SCHOOLS

Eastertide Was the Theme in All instances—Distribution of Flowers.

The Sunday school rooms of the Broadway Congregational church were decorated Sunday with daffodils and potted plants for the special exercises at which many were present. Following a hymn by the school, prayer was offered by Deacon W. R. Burnham, after which an anthem was sung by the choir in a finished manner. There was an exercise carried out by the primary department and recitations by the classes taught by Mrs. O. E. Wulf, Miss Calkins, Miss Edith Young and Miss Julia Wood.

A short talk was given by Rev. E. S. Worcester and at the close potted plants were distribted to members of the primary department by Rev. Dr. Lewellyn Pratt.

Second Congregational Church.

Sunday noon at the Second Congregation of Christ, then must we also doubt that such a man as Julius Cassar ever liked for both are established by the same sort of evidence. No occurrence of history has been subject to more doubt and criticism than this one, but the investigations of the world's greatest minds have only served to establish the fact more firmity. Setablished, the fact seems wonderful, both in itself—no man before or since has ever arisen from the dead—and because of the bearing it has had on the hopes and destinies of man. The resurrection was right to the love and confidence of man, and his superiority over death. The resurrection is ground for belief that we shall live after death.

Second Congregational Church.

Sunday noon at the Second Congregational church the Easter programme was carried out with a large attendance. The direction of the organist, was accomplished by the use of Easter lilles, stock and daffodlis about the platform and altar, and the baptismal four was covered with lilies. The excellent singing by the choir was given under the direction of

"He is risen," the phrase from the gospel for the Sunday, Mark xvi:1-7, was the text from which Rev. Thomas A. Grumbly delivered the Easter ser-mon at St. Patrick's church, during mon at St. Patrick's church, during the solemn high mass in which Rev. William F. Cavanaugh was celebrant. Rev. Father Grumbly deacon, Rev. Edward J. Plunkett, sub-deacon, and the rector, Rev. Hugh Treanor, master of ceremonies. The historical proofs of the fact of the resurrection were cited convincingly, and testimony was adduced from many sources as to the reality of this stupendous miracle, the confirmation of our immortality, the truth upon which our faith is founded. The music arranged for the mass rated with lilles, ferns, carnations and begonias, palms, azaleas, crotons, ferns and lilles completing the sanctuary adornment. At the close of the mass Father Cavanaugh gave benediction of the Blessed Sacrament. The offering was for diocesan charities. Owing to the length of the morning services ves-pers was omitted.

German Lutheran Church-At the German Lutheran church the services opened with confession at 9.45, at which a brief sermon was preached by the pastor, Rev. Theodor Bauck, from the text Not every one that saith unto me Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom, but he that doeth the will of my father which is in heaven. This was followed by the in heaven. This was followed by the Easter service with holy communion, at which the confirmation class of 26 members received their first communion. The sermon was from the text John xx. 15: Why weepest thou whom seekest thou? The music by the choir of 17 members was finely ren-dered and was all of special appropri-ateness to the Easter season. The congregation at all the services filled the church. The pretty floral decorations were furnished and arranged by the Central Baptist Church. The Central Bantist church had two of the largest congregations of the year for the morning and evening services. The flowers, which were furnished by the Sunday school classes and were later distributed to the sick, comprised Easter lilles, white tulips and spiraza, with purple hyacinths, arranged very effectively with palms and hay trees on the platform with the trees on the platform with the open baptistry as a background. The decorations also extended to the choir gallery, where two white doves were suspended. The sermon by the pastor, Rev. C. Wright, at the morning service was upon The Resurrection Conquest, which makes the Easter message one of joy for the world and for the Christian as it was the conquest of the tyranny of sin, the conquest of death and the conquest of unbelief. Five persons were baptized at the morning service. The music in the morning service.

The music in the morning was by the regular church quartette, who rendered the anthems for the service in a pleasing manner and the seprano solo, Thy Redeamer Liveth, was sung with sympathetic expression by Mrs. Grace Aldrich Crowell, whose musical voice was at its best. In the evening the
